

Patrick Magennis is a consultant oral and maxillofacial surgeon based in the regional unit in Liverpool, having completed training there in 2001.

His job involves helping manage the huge facial trauma workload in Liverpool, but he has been working for and with BAOMS since he was the secretary then chair of the Medical Students' Group (now Junior Trainees' Group) in 1989.

His area of enthusiasm is training and trainees in OMFS, writing a handbook for trainees in 1990, designing the Association's first website, and starting the annual National Training and Careers Days in 2007.

He is BAOMS representative on the OMFS SAC and on the Oral Surgery SAC. He runs the 'Register your interest in OMFS' link from the BAOMS website, sending useful information to anyone who thinks they want to know more about our specialty.

He is happy to be contacted by trainees or those interested in training through this link